

ISNS Policy (2019) for presentations by vendors

When a product development is of very significant scientific interest, commercial representatives may be allowed to present the findings at a meeting – it is expected that this would be rare, as commercial companies will typically trial new reagents and technologies with screening laboratories who could then present the findings. Presenters need to disclose their associations by a full conflict of interest statement. Inclusion in the programme does not depend upon the level of sponsorship received. The scientific committee will review the inclusion of such presentations in the programme.
